5. Premium rate services (PRS)

Premium rate services are identified by dialling codes that typically begin with 09 and 089. They are charged at a higher amount than normal calls. Premium rate services can be accessed through a landline, a mobile, a fax or by a personal computer.

The types of services typically offered through PRS lines are: TV voting lines (such as the X Factor), phone chat, information services (such as weather and traffic reports), adult entertainment, technical help lines (such as broadband) and competition lines.

Directory enquiries services with numbers starting 118 are also classed as premium rate services.

The following provides some more detailed information about premium rate services.

5.1 The price of premium rate services

The price of calling premium rate services depends on the number dialled. A complete list of all the prices to premium rate numbers can be found in our price list. The price list and the Terms and Conditions for Post Office HomePhone[®] are available on our website at www.postoffice.co.uk/homephone. Alternatively, customers can obtain this information by calling the Customer Care Line on 0345 600 3210.

5.2. Why premium rate services are more expensive to call

Most premium rate service numbers operate on a 'revenue sharing' basis. This means that most of the cost of making a call to a premium rate service is paid to the service provider, which is the company or agency providing the content or services. The rest of the revenue from the call is shared with the 'originating' telephone company; for example, the Post Office[®] through Post Office HomePhone[®]; and the telephone company that carries and 'terminates' the call on behalf of the service provider, e.g. BT.

5.3. Disputing a call to a premium rate service on your bill

If you feel that the premium rate call was not made from your telephone line then you can contact us via telephone on 0345 600 3210 to ask us to investigate the matter further. However, whilst you may not have personally been aware of someone in the household making the premium rate call, it is most likely that someone has. The registered Post Office HomePhone[®] customer is responsible for all calls that are made from their fixed line phone and if you suspect there is a danger of unauthorised calls being made from your line we recommend you use the call barring services, details of which can be obtained by calling 0345 600 3210.

5.4. The role of PhonepayPlus

PhonepayPlus (www.phonepayplus.org.uk) is the industry-funded regulatory body for all premium rate charged telecommunications services. They regulate premium rate services in their entirety – their content, promotion and overall operation – through a Code of Practice.

One of the roles of PhonepayPlus is to protect consumer interests in the event of cases of abuse or scams involving PRS calls. Ofcom's role in the premium rate regulatory regime is to provide statutory support to the work of PhonepayPlus.

PhonepayPlus set and maintain standards and, as appropriate, requirements for the content, promotion, marketing and provision of premium rate services. They also investigate and adjudicate upon complaints relating to the content, promotion and marketing of premium rate services and can issue directions to ensure they stay within the Code of Practice. PhonepayPlus also administer a system for the payment of claims for compensation for unauthorised use of live services.

PhonepayPlus investigate complaints, and have the power to fine companies and bar access to services if the Code of Practice is breached. It can also bar the individual(s) behind a company from running any other premium rate services under any company name on any telephone network for a defined period.

Additionally, PhonepayPlus may also order a company to pay you a refund once they have completed an investigation into a case of abuse or scam involving PRS calls and where they impose redress as a sanction. The service PhonepayPlus provides is free of charge to consumers and fully independent.

5.5. Finding out which service provider is responsible for a PRS number

Customers can use the PhonepayPlus website, www.phonepayplus.org.uk, to find out certain details about a particular premium rate number, such as the content of service, the price, and which service provider provides the service, including contact details for these service providers. If the service provider is currently under investigation the facility on the website will also tell you this.

Alternatively, the customer service agents on our Customer Care Line can access this service on your behalf and provide the available details. For this assistance, contact us by telephone on 0345 600 3210.

5.6. Making a complaint to PhonepayPlus

If you are concerned about a premium rate service you can make a complaint to PhonepayPlus. You can do this in several ways:

- by using their online complaint form at www.phonepayplus.org.uk
- by calling their free helpline on 0800 500 212 between the hours of 9am and 5pm, Monday to Friday.

5.7 Seeking a refund for premium rate charges

As well as the services offered by PhonepayPlus, if you have a dispute about your charges for premium rate services, that cannot be resolved with Post Office HomePhone[®], you can contact Ombudsman Services: Communications, the industry ombudsman of which we're a member. They can investigate the matter further for you. Further information about how to contact Ombudsman Services: Communications can be found in section 10 of this Code of Practice.

5.8. Industry problem of premium rate deception

Within the telephony industry there is a recognised issue whereby Internet dial-up connections are being diverted to premium rate numbers without the owner's knowledge. The issue, known as "premium rate deception" is where a customer with a dial-up internet connection is viewing premium rate content – such as music, film or adult material – and is switched to a premium rate or international number without their knowledge or consent. This results in very high phone bills for the customer. It doesn't affect broadband customers.

Our network provider is working closely with PhonepayPlus and the Office of Communications (Ofcom) on your behalf to tackle this problem. When premium rate numbers that are deceiving customers are identified we take all possible steps to ensure that customers are unable to connect to these numbers again.

Below is some information about how to protect your computer against this industry-wide problem. Please take some time to read this information and ensure that you have protected yourself. In the meantime, if you discover any instances of this deception, please contact us immediately on our Customer Care Line, 0345 600 3210.

5.9. How to protect yourself from premium rate deception

There are two ways in which premium rate deception can occur:

- your internet dial-up connection is switched to premium rate or international numbers without your knowledge or consent

- you visit a premium site but are not warned about the high cost before entering.

Computers with dial-up Internet connection are vulnerable to this because your connection to the Internet can be changed without your knowledge and it is difficult to detect.

Premium rate deception usually occurs when you are browsing a premium rate content website – for music, films and adult material, for example. Usually, when you access one of these sites a message should appear asking you to install software in order to download material from the website at an explained additional cost.

If you're not warned about this, you could run up very high phone bills without realising it.

Broadband users aren't affected by this problem, as long as you have disconnected the Internet modem from your phone socket and don't use this modem to make fax or voice calls.

There are several things you can do to protect yourself against premium rate deception.

- Browser settings: It's very important to ensure that the browser on your computer is left at the default security setting. By doing this, you'll receive adequate warnings when something is attempting to install dialler software without your knowledge or consent.
- Keep up to date: Make sure that your operating system is regularly patched with the latest upgrades from your software's manufacturer. For Microsoft Windows users please visit <http://windowsupdate.microsoft.com> to ensure your PC settings are up to date.
- Get protection: Your PC should have some form of antivirus software and firewall, which should be updated on a daily basis. Some of these anti-virus packages will even detect rogue diallers. To find out about your software's capabilities, contact your PC supplier.
- Consider call barring these numbers: We can help by putting a bar on all premium rate and/or international numbers on your phone line.
- Report the premium rate numbers: Email us at support@pobroadband.co.uk and tell us the numbers you are concerned about.

5.10. How to bar access to premium rate services

We offer the facility to bar access to premium rate numbers, which will stop anyone from making calls to 090 or 091 numbers. If you wish to have this type of barring applied to your line, contact our Customer Care Line on 0345 600 3210.

6. Number Translation Services (NTS)

Number Translation Services are calls to numbers identified as 'special services' starting with the 08 prefix. This has been identified within the National Telephone Numbering Plan, which is the Ofcom register for telephone numbers. This includes numbers such as 0845 and 0870, 0800 (and the 0500 free phone numbers). Not included are calls to 0844 04 'Surftime' and 080899 flat rate internet access.

The call rates for NTS calls can be found in our price list. We will give the same prominence to the price of NTS calls as we do for all our other call rates. The price list is available on our website at www.postoffice.co.uk/homephone. Alternatively, customers can obtain a free copy by calling the Customer Care Line on 0345 600 3210.

Whenever we refer to call pricing in our marketing material, we include our maximum NTS call prices as well as clear reference to where you can find a complete set of our charges for NTS calls.

If you are a new customer to Post Office HomePhone®, we can provide you with a complete set of prices as above. We will also give you a clear reference to where, on the website and in published price lists, the complete set of NTS call charges can be found.

We also endeavour to make clear in our marketing materials whether any of our special offers and discounts apply to NTS calls. In particular, Post Office HomePhone® has a discount offer of 10% for calls to ten numbers nominated as "Loved Ones".

7. Telephone Preference Service (TPS) and the Fax Preference Service (FPS)

The Telephone Preference Service (TPS) helps you to make sure your telephone number is no longer available to organisations, including charities and voluntary organisations who may telephone you with offers and information you do not wish to receive.

If you are receiving unsolicited tele-marketing calls and do not wish to receive these, you can register with the telephone preference service. You can register online at www.tpsonline.org.uk or by telephone on 0845 070 0707.

The fax preference service allows you to register fax numbers on which you do not wish to receive direct marketing material. You can register for the FPS online at www.fpsonline.org.uk or by telephone on 0845 070 0702.

Faults can occur on the telephone you are using or that of the person you are trying to call, the network we use for carrying our calls with Fujitsu or BT's network.

When you report your fault, we will ask you to perform a few simple checks to help us establish the cause of the problem. If the fault is with our partner, we will work with their fault repair agencies on your behalf.
